

THE EVERYMAN SHAKESPEARE

MACBETH

Foreword by Zoe Caldwell

"Godless images, images of chaos, of blood, of dark, permeate the play. But what truly stunned me while working on it was the daring way Shakespeare presents us not with an evil man but with a man who, while we are watching, removes himself from all human contact. 'Laugh to scorn the power of man' sends chills up my spine"

HAMLET

Foreword by Derek Jacobi

"[Actors] must learn to make Shakespeare's language sound like the language they speak every day. They must live in the moment, create the words out of the air. They must forget that Shakespeare wrote them; get rid of the smell of ink; forget that anybody's ever said them before; pluck them out of the feeling and the situation and make them new"
